

RDC Family Bill & Account Check-In

A practical organization workbook for families noticing missed bills, confusion, unusual charges, or simply wanting a clearer backup plan.

This is not financial advice. The purpose is to spot organization gaps, changes, and possible red flags so the older adult and trusted family can decide what needs attention.

1 | QUICK MONEY-MANAGEMENT SNAPSHOT

Check	Item	Notes / status
☐	Bills are generally paid on time.
☐	The older adult understands which accounts and recurring bills they have.
☐	Mail, statements, and notices are being opened and reviewed.
☐	Utilities and insurance are current.
☐	Someone would notice duplicate charges, unexplained increases, or unfamiliar transactions.
☐	A trusted person knows how to help if the older adult becomes temporarily unable to manage bills.
☐	No one is pressuring the older adult for money, gift cards, wires, cryptocurrency, loans, or account access.

3 | WHAT CHANGED?

Check	Item	Notes / status
☐	A bill that used to be automatic is now late.
☐	Multiple late notices or shutoff warnings have appeared.
☐	The same bill appears to have been paid more than once.
☐	New subscriptions or recurring charges appeared.
☐	Insurance, utility, phone, or service costs increased unexpectedly.
☐	Cash withdrawals are more frequent or harder to explain.
☐	Checks, cards, or account information are being shared with new people.
☐	Gift card, wire-transfer, cryptocurrency, sweepstakes, romance, government-impersonation, or tech-support requests have appeared.
☐	The older adult seems newly confused about money, passwords, bills, or who they owe.

Do not write full account numbers, PINs, or passwords in a workbook that will be left unsecured. Record where secure information is stored instead.
